

ATTACHMENT THEORY INTO THE FUTURE

Sir Richard Bowlby

Sir Richard Bowlby worked as a scientific photographer in various medical research institutions where he produced visual aids for communicating research findings. He now gives lectures to health care professionals using video material and personal insights to promote a much broader understanding of his father's work on attachment theory. He supports a range of organisations that address challenging attachment issues, and is seeking ways to help the general public benefit from a better understanding of attachment relationships.

14th NOVEMBER 2014 10.00—16:00

A valuable opportunity to gain insight into this important area of theory and practice in a comfortable, relaxed environment.

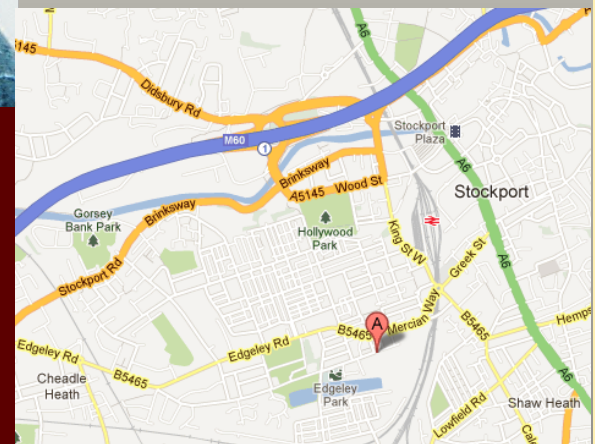

Sir Richard Bowlby will provide a retrospective overview of his father's work, and think about its significance for the future.

The workshop will appeal to counsellors, therapists, education-ists, teachers, social workers and anyone interested in child development.

Sir Richard is especially interested in child care, and he will describe research relating carers' experiences of bereavement to later life problems like dementia. His challenging views have implications for primary carers, service provision, and wider social policy.
